Continuation of the 101st Wilmington Police Academy

The second quarter of 2022 saw the continuation of the 101st Wilmington Police Academy, and the progression of the recruits through the department's intensive training program. In the initial weeks and months of the Academy, our recruits have learned about a wide range of topics, and received training in a variety of areas, including:

- Cultural Diversity and Implicit Bias
- Law Enforcement Legitimacy, Procedural Justice and Ethics
- Community Relations and Community Policing
- Deescalation Tactics
- Patrol Functions and the Laws of Arrest
- Laws of Evidence and Crime Scene Processing
- Critical Incident Stress Management
- Constitutional Law, the Bill of Rights and State and City Laws and Regulations

- Fire Safety and Survival (at the Delaware State Fire School)
- Death Investigations
- Mental Health
- Rendering Emergency Medical Assistance
- Report Writing

Recruits have also learned about various Wilmington Police units and divisions, and about the work of the Crisis Management Tactical Team, the Explosive Ordnance Disposal Team and the Canine Unit. They have also received instruction on various types of investigations, including sexual assaults, financial crimes and property crimes. In the weeks to come, they will receive additional instruction on defensive tactics, collision investigations, domestic violence investigations, patrol vehicle operation and a number of other topics.

Through the course of the Academy, one recruit voluntarily resigned for personal reasons, bringing the total number of recruits active in the Academy to 13, with the following demographic breakdown:

| Race/Ethnicity | Female | Male | Total |
|----------------|----------|-----------|-----------|
| Black | 2 | 6 | 8 |
| Hispanic | 0 | 1 | 1 |

Continued Efforts to Recruit Future Applicants

Even as the current Police Academy class continues, our Human Resources Division is taking steps to recruit applicants for future police academy classes – and we receive contacts from prospective applicants on a daily basis. Our recruitment team keeps in touch with these individuals, and keeps their information on file to ensure we share updates with them for future hiring processes. Our team also recently participated in the Diversity Law Enforcement Job Fair at Temple University, as well as a career fair held at the Community Education Building in downtown Wilmington.

WILMINGTON POLICE DEPARTMENT

Recruitment Update

First Quarter, 2022

April 1, 2022

This quarterly update includes a summary of efforts in the first quarter of 2022 regarding recruitment for the Wilmington Police Department. Included as appendices to this report are the reports for all four quarters of 2021 and 2020, as well as December 2019.

Completing the Selection Process for the 101st Wilmington Police Academy

Efforts in the first quarter of 2022 continued to be devoted to the application and selection process for the 101st Wilmington Police Academy. Following the close of the application process, the WPD Human Resources Division hosted orientation sessions, administered the physical ability test and written test, and held oral board interviews. Through those initial phases of the application process, 34 of the initial 102 applicants remained in the process.

In the first quarter of 2022, we completed background investigations, polygraph investigations, and interviews with the Chief of Police. The final phase of the process involved a psychological evaluation conducted by an independent psychologist contracted by the City's Department of Human Resources using the Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory (MMPI) testing standard. Across these phases, a number of applicants withdrew from the process or were otherwise disqualified after failing to progress through one of the phases:

- 14 applicants were removed from the process following background investigations and review by the WPD command staff and the City Human Resources Department
- 1 applicant withdrew voluntarily, citing the City's residency requirement
- 1 applicant withdrew after accepting a position with another law enforcement agency
- 2 applicants were removed from the process following the psychological exam

Following these final phases of the application and selection process, offers of employment were extended to 16 applicants to join the 101st Wilmington Police Academy. Following that phase, one recruit was not cleared medically to participate in the Academy, and a second recruit resigned for personal reasons. The updated breakdown of recruits is:

| Race/Ethnicity | Female | Male | Total |
|-----------------------|---------------|-------------|--------------|
| Black | 2 | 6 | 8 |
| Hispanic | 0 | 1 | 1 |
| Two or More | 0 | 1 | 1 |
| White | 1 | 3 | 4 |
| Total | 3 | 11 | 14 |

As with past recruitment processes, members of the WPD Human Resources Division used a variety of means to share information about the process and encourage applications. That included members of the recruitment team attending career fairs and other programs at high schools, colleges – including Historically Black Colleges and Universities and participating in the City’s HBCU Week – and visiting community centers to promote the WPD and to share information with those who might be interested in a career in law enforcement. Recruitment teams also worked with the faith community and other community-based organizations to promote the application process.

Chief Robert J. Tracy has recognized the work of Inspector of Administration Charles Emory, Captain Anthony Bowers and the WPD Human Resources Division, for leading recruitment efforts for the Wilmington Police Department. He also acknowledged their efforts to continue to increase the diversity of the department through recruiting applicants from a variety of racial and ethnic backgrounds, and to leverage a variety of strategies to recruit future police officers amidst the national hiring challenges facing law enforcement agencies.

Launching the 101st Wilmington Police Academy

On March 7, the members of the 101st Wilmington Police Academy kicked off their intensive training program, being hosted at the City of Wilmington Emergency Operations Center. They were joined by 3 recruits from the Delaware Capitol Police and 1 member of the Wilmington Fire Department’s Fire Marshal’s Office.

Throughout the Academy, recruits will receive training on the wide range of responsibilities they will have as sworn police officers, as well as preparation for scenarios they will encounter on patrol. The Academy includes training on constitutional law and legal matters, de-escalation tactics, community engagement, law enforcement legitimacy, implicit bias, ethics, procedural justice, patrol functions, and crisis intervention tactics, in addition to many other areas. The recruits will also learn about our department’s 21st century, evidence-based crime strategies and the effective approaches the department has taken to address gun violence. Each day for the recruits begins at 5:30 a.m. with two hours of physical fitness followed by eight hours of classroom instruction.

Continued Recruitment for Future Academy Classes

Our Human Resources Division continues to take steps to recruit applicants for future police academy classes – and we receive contacts from prospective applicants on a daily basis. Our recruitment team keeps in touch with these individuals, and keeps their information on file to ensure we share updates with them for future hiring processes.

Appendix 2
Fourth Quarter 2021 Recruitment Report

WILMINGTON POLICE DEPARTMENT

Recruitment Update

Fourth Quarter, 2021

January 1, 2022

This quarterly update includes a summary of efforts in the fourth quarter of 2021 regarding recruitment for the Wilmington Police Department. Included as appendices to this report are the reports for the First, Second and Third Quarters of 2021, the First, Second, Third and Fourth Quarters of 2020, and December 2019, which include details about past efforts and initiatives.

Recruitment for the 101st Wilmington Police Academy

Efforts in the fourth quarter of 2021 continued to be devoted to the application and selection process for the 101st Wilmington Police Academy, which opened in July and closed in October. While our initial application deadline was at the end of August, that deadline was extended to allow for additional recruitment efforts during HBCU Week, National Night Out and additional career and job fairs and events. Members of our recruitment team kept in consistent contact with all applicants throughout the process, including during the period of time in which the deadline was extended, to ensure they were kept updated on the process and timeline.

The Wilmington Police Department received 102 total applications, with the breakdown of the applicants as follows:

| Race/Ethnicity | Female | Male | Total |
|-----------------------|---------------|-------------|--------------|
| Black | 5 | 25 | 30 |
| Hispanic | 2 | 14 | 16 |
| Two or More | 3 | 2 | 5 |
| White | 6 | 22 | 28 |
| Unknown | 6 | 17 | 23 |
| Total | 22 | 80 | 102 |

Following the closing of the application process, all applicants were contacted and two mandatory orientation sessions were conducted. Following those orientations, the physical ability test and written test were administered, followed by Oral Board interviews.

Across these phases, a number of applicants withdrew from the process or were otherwise disqualified after failing to progress through one of the phases:

- 19 applicants failed to attend the mandatory orientation sessions; those who missed the first orientation process were given the opportunity to attend the second. Members of our recruitment team made several efforts to contact each applicant to discuss their reason for not attending, and those explanations most commonly included a lack of interest in continuing in the process.

- 3 applicants withdrew from the process after being hired by another law enforcement agency.
- 2 applicants were disqualified based upon recent drug use or prior convictions.
- 4 applicants withdrew prior to the Physical Ability Test.
- 12 applicants failed the Physical Ability Test.
- 16 applicants did not participate in the Physical Ability Test. When members of our recruitment team contacted those applicants to discuss their reasons for not attending, explanations included (1) being engaged in the hiring process for another law enforcement agency; (2) a lack of interest in continuing in the process; and (3) a lack of preparation for the test.
- 2 applicants withdrew from the process prior to the Oral Board interview phase.
- 5 applicants did not progress beyond the Oral Board interview phase.
- 5 applicants did not progress beyond the pre-background screening that included a review of criminal records and prior/current narcotics use.

The updated breakdown of applicants remaining in the process is as follows:

| Race/Ethnicity | Female | Male | Total |
|-----------------------|---------------|-------------|--------------|
| Black | 4 | 12 | 16 |
| Hispanic | 2 | 4 | 6 |
| Two or More | 0 | 1 | 1 |
| White | 2 | 9 | 11 |
| Total | 8 | 26 | 34 |

Currently, the WPD Human Resources Division is in the process of conducting background investigations and polygraph investigations for each applicant. That will be followed by interviews with the Chief of Police and psychological evaluations, the latter of which are conducted by a psychologist contracted by the City’s Department of Human Resources using the Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory (MMPI) testing standard.

Continued Recruitment for Future Academy Classes

Even as we continue to progress with the selection and hiring process for the 101st Wilmington Police Academy, our recruitment team continues to share information about career opportunities and recruit applicants for future police academies.

Third Quarter 2021 Recruitment Report

WILMINGTON POLICE DEPARTMENT

Recruitment Update

Third Quarter, 2021

October 1, 2021

This quarterly update includes a summary of efforts in the third quarter of 2021 regarding recruitment for the Wilmington Police Department. Included as appendices to this report are the reports for the First and Second Quarters of 2021, the First, Second, Third and Fourth Quarters of 2020, and December 2019, which include details about past efforts and initiatives.

Recruitment for the 101st Wilmington Police Academy

Efforts in the third quarter of 2021 were devoted to promoting the application process for the 101st Wilmington Police Academy, which opened in July.

Efforts to publicize the 101st Wilmington Police Academy application process

Following the opening of the application process, the Wilmington Police Department has taken a number of steps to promote the application process and in the hopes of attracting a wide range of applicants representing a variety of backgrounds, including:

- Issuing a joint news release from the Mayor's Office and the Police Department, which was subsequently shared on social media
- Issuing details about the application process and reminders about the deadline through the department's Nixle account and social media platforms
- Posting job announcements and other materials online, including collaboration with the City Human Resources Department to once again offer an online application portal and a fillable PDF application option for prospective applicants
- Printing and distributing flyers and posters throughout the City, including local businesses, community centers and faith communities
- Sharing information about the application process and career opportunities at WPD with the National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives (NOBLE), the Delaware Association of Latino Law Enforcement and the Interdenominational Ministers Action Council

Attending recruitment fairs and recruiting events

The WPD Recruitment Team also continued its efforts to share information about the 101st Wilmington Police Academy through attending recruitment fairs and events, including:

- Delaware Technical Community College – Job Fair (August 4)
- Philadelphia Veterans Job Fair at Lincoln Financial Field (August 5)
- Information table at the Christiana Mall (August 7, August 14 and August 21)
- Flyer distribution at local churches in Wilmington (August 15 and August 22)
- Recruitment expo

for law enforcement careers in King of Prussia, PA (September 1)

These efforts resulted in the distribution of 66 paper applications in addition to flyers, brochures and other information about our agency and the current application process. Our team will continue to follow up with those who have expressed interest, and will attend additional events to get the word out about the current application process.

Collaboration with WITN-22 to highlight career opportunities and the faces of WPD

The Wilmington Police Department partnered for a second time with WITN-22 to produce a video highlighting the department's application process. This year's video highlighted more than 20 individual members of the department, who shared on camera details about why they wanted to become a police officer and what they love most about their job. The clip features the range of backgrounds represented by our officers, as well as the variety of assignments and opportunities for those protecting and serving Delaware's largest city.

That video can be viewed here: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=z6HcDvsldHo>

Following up with prospective applicants

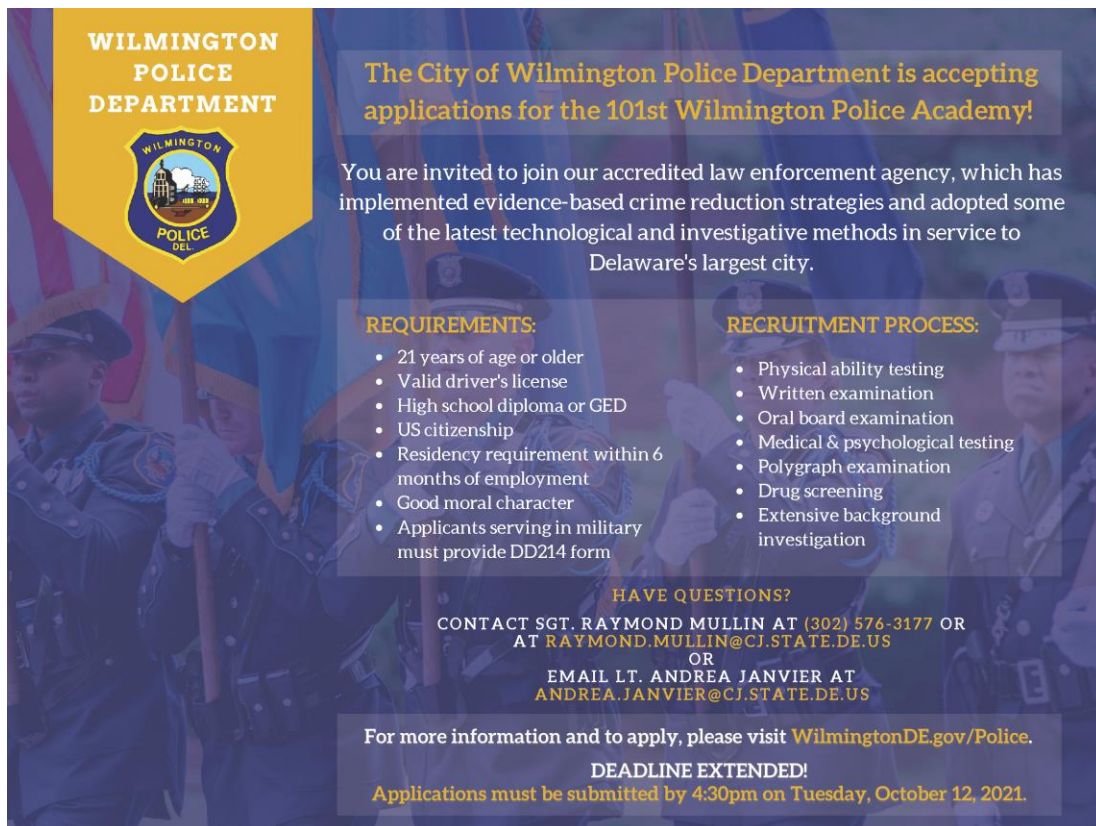

The WPD Human Resources Division is always working to share information about the Wilmington Police Department and to identify prospective future applicants. Since June 2020, members of the recruitment team received virtual or online “interest cards” from 220 individuals. Each of those individuals who has previously expressed interest in joining the WPD has been contacted and provided with information on the application process.

Continuing efforts to promote the application process

The initial application deadline was set for August 31, but we have extended that deadline until 4:30 p.m. on Tuesday, October 12 to allow for members of the recruitment team to participate in additional recruitment events, including the September 1 expo in Pennsylvania.

Additionally, our teams will participate in programming with the City of Wilmington’s HBCU Week, as well as our department’s National Night Out on Tuesday, October 5.

Second Quarter 2021 Recruitment Report

WILMINGTON POLICE DEPARTMENT

Recruitment Update

Second Quarter, 2021

July 1, 2021

This quarterly update includes a summary of efforts in the second quarter of 2021 regarding recruitment for the Wilmington Police Department. Included as appendices to this report are the reports for the First Quarter of 2021, the First, Second, Third and Fourth Quarters of 2020, and December 2019, which include details about past efforts and initiatives.

Conclusion and Graduation of the 100th Wilmington Police Academy

The second quarter of 2021 saw the conclusion of the historic 100th Wilmington Police Academy and the graduation of the City's 19 newest police officers. While this latest Academy followed others before it – with comprehensive training on everything from equipment and law enforcement tactics to laws and regulations, as well as cultural diversity, implicit bias, law enforcement legitimacy, procedural justice, de-escalation, community engagement and more – it was also marked by the COVID-19 pandemic. The WPD Human Resources Division staff worked tirelessly to continue the application, acceptance and training processes amid COVID-19 health restrictions and guidance, and the team was successful in keeping this important process on track while ensuring the health and safety of recruits and instructors.

On April 30, a graduation for the 19 newest police officers and their family members, friends and loved ones was held at the Chase Center on the Riverfront. The ceremony included comments from Mayor Michael S. Purzycki, who spoke about the dedication of these men and women to a life of community service as police officers. “It is my hope that our new officers embrace the need for greater transparency and accountability as an opportunity to be part of an evolving era of police work in our City and around the nation,” said Mayor Purzycki. “These new officers will now join the ranks the finest first-responders in all of Delaware. They have my admiration and support.”

The newest members of the Wilmington Police Department are Colin Bond; Hakeem Brown; Krystal Cerezo; Logan Crumlish; Michael Davis; Zakiya Downs; Sayer Evans; Rosario Franzone; Thomas Geisel; Joseph Gervasi; Jessica Gledhill; Ryan Jacobs; Alexis Ludlum; Ryan Murzyn; Anna Pagina-Boyd; Antoine Reid; Bryan Smagala; Daniel Wilson; and Amir Young.

Since their graduation, these 19 officers have been assigned to Field Training Officers – senior patrol officers who provide further training, supervision and guidance as the recent graduates begin their careers as law enforcement officers.

Commencement of the Hiring Process for the 101st Wilmington Police Academy

In June, the Wilmington Police Department met the statutory threshold to commence the hiring process for the 101st Wilmington Police Academy – meaning that the department fell below 95% of its authorized strength of 319 sworn police officers. Pursuant to City Code, Chief Robert J. Tracy presented before City Council a resolution representing current staffing levels, to begin the process of accepting applications for the next Academy. City Council approved the resolution on June 17.

In the coming weeks, the WPD Human Resources Division will continue to work with the City Human Resources Department to open up the application process. As the WPD is always working to recruit the next classes of police officers, members of the Recruitment Team will share information about the application process with those who have previously expressed interest in joining the department. The WPD will also continue to work with community partners – including elected officials, community leaders, faith institutions, businesses, educational institutions, civic associations and nonprofit organizations – to solicit applications. More information about the hiring process will be made available on our website, at WilmingtonDE.gov/Police.

First Quarter, 2021

April 1, 2021

This quarterly update includes a summary of efforts in the first quarter of 2021 regarding recruitment for the Wilmington Police Department. Included as appendices to this report are the reports for the First, Second, Third and Fourth Quarters of 2020, as well as December 2019, which include details about past efforts and initiatives.

Continuation of the 100th Wilmington Police Academy

The first quarter of 2021 saw the continuation of the WPD's historic 100th Police Academy, and the progression of the 19 recruits through the intensive training program. While our Academy has traditionally been held on the campus of Delaware Technical Community College, this session is being hosted at the Police Athletic League of Wilmington location, which allows for additional space to ensure proper social distancing is maintained at all times, including during physical fitness training and classroom instruction.

Since the start of the Academy, recruits have received training and instruction on a wide range of topics, including:

- Cultural diversity and implicit bias
- Law enforcement legitimacy, procedural justice and ethics
- De-escalation tactics
- Community relations and community policing
- Multi-jurisdictional partnerships and collaborations
- Patrol and investigative functions
- Constitutional law, the Bill of Rights and State and City laws and regulations
- Laws of evidence and crime scene processing
- Critical incident management and crisis intervention
- Stress management
- Training on various equipment, including Taser devices

In the coming weeks, the recruits will continue to receive training and participate in various exercises to prepare them for the range of scenarios they will encounter as they begin their policing careers in the WPD's Uniformed Services Division. Throughout this intensive training program, the recruits have learned about our agency's 21st century, evidence-based crime strategies and the effective approaches the department has taken to address gun violence. The remaining portions of the Academy will include vehicle training and a number of tests and examinations, which will be followed by the Academy's graduation which is scheduled for later this spring.

Future Recruitment Efforts

As our agency has done consistently in the past, we continue our ongoing efforts to recruit future Wilmington Police officers even as the 100th Wilmington Police Academy is underway. This includes a focus on continuing to attract diverse candidates, and building off of our successes in recruiting steadily more diverse Police Academy classes – with a resulting increase in the diversity of our department as a whole over time.

Members of our recruitment teams continue to participate in virtual job and career fairs, and officers throughout the department share information about future career opportunities with residents and others they interact with on a daily basis – whether it is while they are on patrol or through community engagement, civic association meetings, church functions or other community-based programs. We look forward to again attending in-person recruitment events and job fairs once those programs can be safely resumed and as public health guidance and restrictions allow.

WILMINGTON POLICE DEPARTMENT

Recruitment Update

Fourth Quarter, 2020

January 1, 2021

This quarterly update includes a summary of efforts in the fourth quarter of 2020 regarding recruitment for the Wilmington Police Department. Included as appendices to this report are the reports for the First, Second and Third Quarters of 2020, as well as December 2019, which include details about past efforts and initiatives.

Launch of the 100th Wilmington Police Academy

The final quarter of 2020 saw the completion of the application and selection processes for the Wilmington Police Department’s historic 100th Police Academy, as well as the start of the rigorous training program. Following the completion of the Chief’s interviews, psychological evaluations and final selections, on November 16 the 21 recruits selected for the class began the six-month training program.

The 21 recruits were selected from among the 141 men and women who initially applied to join the class; of those, six are current Wilmington residents and the others will have to establish residency in the City after graduation to comply with the City’s five-year residency requirement for all City employees. Since the start of the 100th WPD Academy, two recruits have withdrawn; the demographic breakdown of those remaining in the class is as follows:

| Race/Ethnicity | Female | Male | Total |
|-----------------------|---------------|-------------|--------------|
| Black | 1 | 5 | 6 |
| Hispanic | 1 | 0 | 1 |
| White | 3 | 9 | 12 |
| Total | 5 | 14 | 19 |

Chief Robert J. Tracy has recognized the efforts of Inspector of Administration Charles Emory; Captain Tashawn Counts; Captain Anthony Bowers; and the WPD Human Resources Division team for their continued efforts to recruit large numbers of applicants amidst nationwide hiring challenges for law enforcement, and for their efforts to attract minority recruits and to help continue to increase the diversity of the Wilmington Police Department. The recruitment process for this class reflected efforts by the City to leverage media exposure and work with the community to attract interested candidates. These efforts included attendance by WPD recruiters at career fairs and other programs in high schools and colleges – including Historically Black Colleges and Universities – and visits to community centers and community meetings. WPD recruitment teams also worked with City Council members, the faith community, and other community-based organizations to promote the application process.

Chief Tracy has also applauded their flexibility and adaptation amidst Covid-19 health guidance and restrictions, as they have continued to manage the department’s application, selection and training processes despite the challenges posed by the pandemic. The team has put into place various safeguards and precautions for the members of the academy class as well, to ensure their health and safety throughout the training program. Classroom and training space is regularly disinfected and cleaned; desks have been arranged to allow for social distancing; partitions have been installed between workspaces; and health guidance is being followed.

In the weeks and months to come, the 19 recruits will receive training to help prepare them for the wide range of scenarios they will encounter in service to the City of Wilmington. The Academy includes training on constitutional law and legal matters, de-escalation tactics, community engagement, law enforcement legitimacy, implicit bias, ethics, procedural justice, patrol functions, and crisis intervention tactics, in addition to many other topics. The recruits will also receive training and education about the agency’s 21st century, evidence-based crime strategies and the effective approaches the department has taken to address gun violence. Each day for the recruits begins at 5:30 a.m. with two hours of physical fitness, followed by eight hours of classroom instruction.

Future Recruitment Efforts

As our agency has done consistently in past years, efforts to recruit future Wilmington Police officers continue to take place even as this academy class is in session. Members of the recruitment team are exploring participation in virtual job and career fairs, and look forward to resuming participation in traditional, in-person recruitment events and programs once public health guidance and restrictions allow.

Appendix 7
Third Quarter 2020 Recruitment Report

WILMINGTON POLICE DEPARTMENT

Recruitment Update

Third Quarter, 2020

October 1, 2020

This quarterly update includes a summary of efforts in the third quarter of 2020 regarding recruitment for the Wilmington Police Department. Included as appendices to this report are the reports for the First and Second Quarters of 2020, as well as December 2019, which include details about past efforts and initiatives.

As noted in our previous quarter's report, it is critical to continue to consider the impact of Covid-19 and the global and national health pandemic on services and activities in Wilmington and across the country. In particular, hiring freezes, travel restrictions and the suspension of many operations have affected many aspects of Wilmington government, including our recruitment efforts and the application process for the 100th Wilmington Police Academy. However, the WPD Command Staff and Human Resources Division have continued to work with health officials and to follow health guidance as we make adjustments to ensure these processes can continue.

100th Wilmington Police Academy

Following approval of a resolution by City Council and the department meeting the requisite staffing threshold as codified in the Wilmington City Code, the application process for the 100th Wilmington Police Academy officially opened in early February. The application process closed on March 27.

In the months that followed, the WPD Human Resources Division – under the leadership of Captain Anthony Bowers and Inspector Charles Emory – has worked diligently to proceed with the traditional application process while adapting to public health guidance and restrictions. As noted in our last quarterly report, these steps have included holding orientation meetings and question-and-answer sessions virtually using the Zoom platform, along with weekly check-ins through email and phone calls with each applicant. The physical ability and written test phases were completed in June, with steps in place to ensure compliance with CDC and public health recommendations and guidelines.

The department subsequently completed the Oral Board phase of the application and selection process on August 3 and 4, and the Human Resources Division more recently conducted background investigations and polygraph examinations for each applicant. The next phase of the process, interviews with the Chief of Police, are underway.

The updated breakdown of applicants remaining in the process is as follows:

| Race/Ethnicity | Female | Male | Total |
|----------------|--------|------|-------|
| Black | 2 | 13 | 15 |
| Hispanic | 4 | 6 | 10 |
| Two or More | 1 | 1 | 2 |
| White | 3 | 17 | 20 |
| Total | 10 | 37 | 47 |

While some applicants did not pass various phases of the application and selection process, others withdrew to accept positions with other law enforcement agencies or to pursue careers outside of law enforcement.

Future Recruitment Efforts

Our agency continues its efforts to recruit throughout the year, and to cultivate interest in our department among those who might be interested in applying for future academy classes. While we will follow the guidance of public health officials at the time, we hope to have the opportunity to resume normal recruitment efforts and participation in job and career fairs and events in the spring. Additionally, we are exploring participation in future programs that might be conducted by some of our college, university and community partners virtually.

Continued Expansion of the WPD Website and Recruitment Materials

Over the course of the past several months, the Wilmington Police Department has significantly enhanced its website, dedicating a new section to recruitment and providing details on the hiring process. Since our last quarterly report, the department has also posted its Policy and Procedures Manual, in its entirety with only limited redactions, online for the public to review. With this step, our agency continues to act on the vanguard of law enforcement agencies in enhancing transparency and sharing more details about how we work each day to enhance public safety in Delaware’s largest city. While this measure was not specifically connected to recruitment, we have found among our recent applicants that the innovations our agency has brought about over the past several years – including the crime strategies we have implemented, and the community-centric approach we take to policing – have increased their interest in our agency.

In our last report, we included mention of a new web-based recruitment interest form. Since adding that functionality to our website, we have received contacts from 38 individuals interested in joining our agency. Their information will be kept on file, and they will be contacted regarding future hiring processes.

In addition, we have refreshed some of our materials for recruitment, including stand-up banners for career fairs and recruiting events. We have also developed updated recruitment brochures to reflect the crime strategies our department has adopted; updated listings of career opportunities within the Wilmington Police Department; and links to our updated recruitment website and our agency's social media platforms.

Second Quarter 2020 Recruitment Report

WILMINGTON POLICE DEPARTMENT

Recruitment Update

Second Quarter, 2020

July 1, 2020

This quarterly update includes a summary of efforts in the second quarter of 2020 regarding recruitment for the Wilmington Police Department. Included as appendices to this report are the reports for the First Quarter of 2020, as well as December 2019, which include details about past efforts and initiatives.

General Efforts Amidst Covid-19

It is critical to consider the role of Covid-19 and the global and national health pandemic, and the impact that it has had on services and activities in Wilmington and throughout the United States. With hiring freezes, travel restrictions and the suspension of many operations, the City of Wilmington has been affected by the pandemic, as has the hiring process for the 100th Wilmington Police Academy. Travel restrictions in particular have played a role in limiting traditional selection process phases. In spite of these challenges, however, the WPD Command Staff and Human Resources Division has adapted and found ways to continue to engage with applicants while keeping the selection process moving forward, as detailed in this report.

100th Wilmington Police Academy

Following approval of a resolution by City Council and the department meeting the requisite staffing threshold as codified in the Wilmington City Code, the application process for the 100th Wilmington Police Academy officially opened in early February. The application process closed on March 27.

The WPD received a total of 136 applications. Since the application period closed, 5 applicants have voluntarily withdrawn from the process; of those, 2 reported that they accepted non-law enforcement positions.

The demographic breakdown of the 131 applicants remaining in the process is as follows:

| Race/Ethnicity | Female | Male | Total |
|-----------------------|---------------|-------------|--------------|
| Asian | 1 | 0 | 1 |
| Black | 10 | 43 | 53 |
| Hispanic | 8 | 12 | 20 |
| Two or More | 2 | 3 | 5 |
| White | 5 | 47 | 52 |
| Total | 26 | 105 | 131 |

Following the close of the application process, members of the Human Resources Division explored virtual platforms that could serve in place of in-person meetings and information sessions. Each applicant was invited to participate in a meeting via the Zoom platform, which detailed the selection from start to finish; included information about the Wilmington Police Department; and included remarks from Chief Tracy. Those meetings took place on Tuesday, April 21; Thursday, April 23; and Tuesday, April 28.

Members of the Human Resources Division also held mandatory test preparation meetings through the Zoom platform, which took place on Tuesday, May 26; Wednesday, May 27; Thursday, May 28 and Tuesday, June 2.

On a weekly basis, the WPD Human Resources Division has been in touch with each applicant – by email and/or phone – to check in, provide updates and answer questions about the selection process as well as the impact of Covid-19.

Following the lifting of travel restrictions, the Physical Ability and Written Tests were able to be administered on June 27 and 28, in a location that allowed for social distancing and adherence to all CDC and public health recommendations and guidelines. Following this phase of the process, the department is in the process of scheduling Oral Board preparation and Oral Board testing.

Expansion of the WPD Recruitment Website

Over the course of the past several months, the Wilmington Police Department has significantly enhanced its website, dedicating a new section to recruitment and providing details on the hiring process. That section includes a web form that visitors can use to share their information with the recruitment team, for a follow-up acknowledgement and notification when the hiring process for the next police academy begins. Over the course of the first few weeks of that form being live, 8 individuals already completed the form to express their interest in future academy classes.

Recruitment Update

First Quarter, 2020

April 1, 2020

This quarterly update includes a summary of efforts in the first quarter of 2020 regarding recruitment for the Wilmington Police Department. The December 2019 Recruitment Report, which includes background on our agency's general recruitment efforts, is included as 'Appendix 1'.

100th Wilmington Police Academy

Following approval of a resolution by City Council and the department meeting the requisite staffing threshold as codified in the Wilmington City Code, the application process for the 100th Wilmington Police Academy officially opened in early February.

Efforts to publicize the 100th Wilmington Police Academy application process

Following the opening of the application process, the Wilmington Police Department has taken a number of steps to promote the application process and in the hopes of attracting a wide range of applicants representing a variety of backgrounds, including:

- Issuing a joint news release from the Mayor's Office and the Police Department, which was subsequently shared on social media
- Distributing flyers about the academy in City water bill mailings
- Posting job announcements and other materials online
 - This has included working with the City Human Resources Department and the IT Department to create an online application portal – this will be the first time this has been available for a police academy recruitment process
- Distributing printed applications at the City/County Building as well as the Wilmington Police Department at 4th and Walnut Streets (House Sergeant's Office)

Arranging interviews with media outlets

Given the department's limited budget for advertising and recruiting, we invested significant time and effort in leveraging relationships and arranging interviews with media outlets in Delaware and throughout the region, with the goal of promoting the academy application process.

Those efforts have included:

- Inspector Charles Emory was interviewed by NBC 10, following a contact with the Philadelphia-based station about getting the word out about the application on NBC as well as through Telemundo and the NBC network of stations
- Sergeant Michael Coleman participated in a ride-along with a producer from WITN-22, to film material for a PSA on the 100th Wilmington Police Academy
- Chief Robert Tracy joined WITN-22 host Yesenia Taveras for a live segment of IN Focus, during which he spoke about the efforts of the Wilmington Police Department, his career in law enforcement, and the 100th Wilmington Police Academy
- Captain Tashawn Counts, Lieutenant Andrea Janvier and Sergeant David Prado visited Channel 28 to film a PSA promoting the 100th Wilmington Police Academy
- Inspector Charles Emory and Captain Tashawn Counts visited the studios of Power 99 in Philadelphia for an interview with host Loraine Ballard Morrill, which aired as part of a podcast focusing on the 100th Wilmington Police Academy, as well as the community engagement efforts of the WPD and the training officers receive related to de-escalation, working with individuals experiencing mental health issues and more. That podcast has aired online and on the air across the iHeart Radio media network.

Attending community meetings and events

With the objective of sharing news about the 100th Wilmington Police Academy with as many Wilmingtonians as possible, members of the command staff and the WPD Human Resources Division visited community meetings and sites throughout the city to share information about the process, answer questions and encourage residents to apply. Those include:

Following up with interested parties

During each field visit of the WPD Recruitment Team, as well as through regular contacts, calls and emails, the WPD Human Resources Division creates and maintains interest cards, with contact information about individuals who, at one point, expressed interest in applying for a future academy.

As of February 2020, the WPD had accumulated 189 interest cards, and each of those individuals was contacted with details about the application process.

Advertising and additional outreach

The WPD Human Resources Division has also worked with each WPD division and unit to spread the word about the academy. Through these collaborations, advertisements have been posted throughout the City and materials have been provided to the dozens of groups and entities, including:

- Members of the Wilmington City Council
- Neighborhood Planning Councils and Civic Associations
- Faith communities and congregations
- Westside Coalition/St. Paul's Church
- Latin American Community Center

Advertisements have also been circulated through The News Journal (several Sunday editions); the National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives (NOBLE) and the National Latino Peace Officers Association.

Additionally, members of the Philadelphia Police Department's Recruitment Unit met with WPD staff, and have collected flyers about our academy to distribute to African-American, Hispanic and Asian communities, as well as neighborhoods, businesses and military veterans throughout the Philadelphia region.

Appendix 10
December 2019 Recruitment Report

WILMINGTON POLICE DEPARTMENT

Recruitment Report

December 2019

Prepared by Inspector Charles Emory and Captain Tashawn Counts

Background and Objectives

The City of Wilmington, Delaware, is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer. Recent Census estimates reflect an overall population of just over 70,000 residents, of whom 58.1% are African American, 34% are Caucasian and 10.8% are Hispanic. Ongoing recruitment undertaken by the Wilmington Police Department reflects our continuous efforts to attract applicants who are representative of the community we serve, without jeopardizing the integrity of the hiring process.

Recruitment Standards and Best Practices

The department’s recruitment and hiring processes reflect a collaboration between the Wilmington Police Department’s Human Resources Division – led by Captain Tashawn Counts and overseen by Inspector of Administration Charles Emory – and the City of Wilmington’s Department of Human Resources led by Charlotte B. Barnes. The WPD, which is accredited through the Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies (CALEA), follows best-practice standards set by the Commission and followed by departments throughout the United States. Those standards encompass administrative practices and procedures; equal employment opportunity and recruitment; job opportunity and publicity; and professional and legal responsibilities in the selection process. Additional elements of the recruitment process are set forth for all Delaware law enforcement agencies through State law and the Council on Police Training (COPT).

99th Police Academy

At a time when police departments across the country are struggling to attract applicants for hiring processes, the Wilmington Police Department continues to see high levels of interest—with 175 applicants participating in the process for the 99th Wilmington Police Academy that began last March, including the 32 recruits that graduated in August. A third of that class was comprised of minority recruits.

100th Police Academy

The Wilmington Police Department anticipates that the 100th Wilmington Police Academy will commence in calendar year 2020. In anticipation of this process, from September through December of 2019, recruitment teams attended 12 college and job fairs – half of which took place at Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs), and one that was sponsored by the National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives (NOBLE). Those efforts have resulted thus far in the collection of 141 interest cards from potential applicants, of whom 83 were male and 58 were female.

Overall Recruitment Efforts

Recruitment efforts for the Wilmington Police Department are led by Inspector Emory and Captain Counts, along with other Human Resources Division staff – including Lieutenant Andrea Janvier, Master Sergeant David Prado, and Master Corporal Simeon Crocker. Additional officers from various divisions and units also participate in recruitment events, providing insights from their experiences in other divisions and units to potential applicants.

The WPD Human Resources Division recruits throughout the year in anticipation of when the next academy will be held. Staff works to identify individuals who might be interested in and qualified for a career in law enforcement. While formal recruitment and Police Academy processes commence once the department’s manpower levels reach 95 percent of the overall authorized strength of 315 (which is currently 299 positions), members of the HR Division as well as police officers from other divisions and units participate in recruitment efforts with the goal of reaching potential applicants with information on the many career opportunities available in policing.

WPD Recruitment Teams

Our efforts to enhance the diversity of our department begin with our recruitment teams; the WPD Human Resources Division actively recruits officers of all genders and racial/ethnic backgrounds to participate in these teams. Those selected receive specialized training. Some recruitment team members are also part of the National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives, and network with other NOBLE members from across the country to share strategies and ideas to help bolster the recruitment of minority applicants.

Other Recruitment Team Appearances

In previous years, in preparation for upcoming academies, recruitment teams have participated in job fairs and career fairs with numerous colleges, universities and community-based institutions. They have included the John Jay College of Criminal Justice; Delaware State University; Delaware Technical Community College; Morgan State University; Rutgers University; Claymont Community Center; the United States Department of Labor (Wilmington office); St. Joseph University; the University of Pennsylvania; Temple University, Wesley College; and Lincoln University, among others. Ongoing recruitment efforts also include colleges, universities and community-based institutions.

Presentations, Recruitment Fairs, Community Contacts

Our recruiting teams have made various presentations and participated in community programs and recruitment fairs to increase the diversity of applicants.

The WPD also recruits for academy candidates through its contacts with the Latin American Community Center; the William “Hicks” Anderson Community Center; the Department of Labor; and with community faith leaders and those serving young people in Wilmington – reflecting our efforts to reach as many potential applicants as possible in our community. Our team has also worked with the Philadelphia Police Department to recruit in various sections of Philadelphia to reach potential applicants representing a broad range of cultural backgrounds.

Youth Police Academy

The Wilmington Police Department organizes an annual Youth Police Academy, which includes participants ranging in age from 13 to 17, which helps to promote police-community relations and spark an interest among young people for a career in law enforcement.

Community Engagement

Our department’s community engagement philosophy states that every officer is a community policing officer who is engaged in a variety of ways with the community being served. This has resulted in stronger relationships between officers and the community. These officers work in the same neighborhoods each time they report for duty. They are engaged in the community and they play a key role in helping to identify potential applicants. They also work with local businesses to provide recruitments materials for distribution to patrons.

Ongoing Strategies for WPD Recruitment

The Wilmington Police Department leads the region in recruitment efforts. Captain Counts recently participated in a working group in Washington, DC with the Police Executive Research Forum that resulted in a publication, “The Workforce Crisis, and What Police Agencies Are Doing About It.” Our agency continues to explore innovative recruitment strategies to supplement our traditional outreach methods. These strategies for the 100th Police Academy include:

- Issuing news releases and postings to WPD and City of Wilmington social media accounts
- Posting job announcements and other materials through online job platforms
- Scheduling interviews with media outlets to promote the recruitment process
- Participation in community programs and recruitment fairs
- Recruitment efforts at colleges, universities and community-based institutions

- Exploring advertising opportunities with WDEL, Telemundo, Power 99 and other platforms
- Exploring advertising opportunities on DART buses and billboards
- Flyers to be inserted into water bills and in other city billings and mailed announcements
- Flyers for distribution door-to-door in neighborhoods

The Wilmington Police Department is also looking at additional recruitment options centered on the successful Cadet Program that it has organized in the past, with the goal of developing a new program to identify youth interested in policing careers and engaging with them as they finish school in the hopes they will apply upon graduation.

Providing Applicants with the Tools to Succeed

Once individuals have submitted their applications, efforts are made to ensure that they have the tools to succeed in the hiring process. All applicants are required to participate in mandatory orientation sessions, which can also help them through the hiring process which includes:

Physical ability test

Applicants are informed on what to expect and how to successfully pass the physical ability test

Written test

Applicants are provided with an informational packet that explains the written test process, as well as a practice test to gauge their overall knowledge

Applicants who pass these tests are invited to participate in additional orientation sessions that help prepare them for the oral interview and the Chief's interview.

Those interested in a career with the Wilmington Police Department are encouraged to contact the WPD Human Resources Division at 302.576-3170.
